

MBA in Sustainability

Adjunct Faculty Positions

Bard College's low-residency MBA in Sustainability program, based in New York City, has openings for visiting lecturers to teach the following courses in the spring semester of 2018:

- Globalization and Emerging Markets
- ImpactLab: Finance for Sustainable Business

The Globalization course helps students understand the drivers behind globalization, and sustainable business opportunities in emerging markets. Some core macroeconomics instruction is included. ImpactLab is new course on sustainable investing strategies in public and private markets, focusing on defining and evaluating impact, and insuring financial return.

Bard's MBA program is one of a select group of programs globally that fully integrates sustainability into a business curriculum. Courses address core MBA material through a sustainability lens. Bard students master the business case for sustainability, understanding how to align profit with social and environmental goals.

Faculty members teach during intensive weekend residencies held once a month in Manhattan. In addition, they teach an online evening session each week between the monthly residencies. The low-residency format allows flexibility in residential location.

MBA faculty members are expected to have earned a Ph.D., J.D., M.B.A., M.P.A. or equivalent degree. Successful candidates will have an established record of excellence in teaching. For more information about Bard's MBA program, visit the MBA website <http://www.bard.edu/mba>

To apply, send a cover letter, CV, and names and contact information for three references to interfolio at: <http://apply.interfolio.com/45781>. Applications will be reviewed as received.

Bard College is an equal opportunity employer, and we welcome applications from those who contribute to our diversity.
